with it- from a moral, and social standpoint; not touching upon the legal point at all.

I am very desirous to present the question in not only the clearest, but the strongest, and most convincing manner, to use only the best, and most unanswerable arguments, in fact, make it a perfect success.

Fearing that in my great earnestness, I may overlook some of the best points, will you be so very kind as to help me, by writing at your very earliest convenience some of the strongest points that I can use to prove that her conviction will be impressed morally, and socially, by participation in public exercises. Hope you will pet that I have not intruded too much upon your time, believe me yours

My dear Mr Garrison.

14 I knowing
the interest you take in the woman question, in all it's bearings upon the sex, I write to beg of you to help me, by giving to me the benefit of your wide thought upon the question. I want to prepare an article for a few friends upon the question, how will participation in Government improve the condition of women. I wish to deal
